Course Description:

This class is intended for any officer/agent who conducts law enforcement actions in California. This class will get you the information you need to legally get into criminal's pockets, vehicles, and houses. The search and seizure laws are under attack in the courts and by our legislature! Over the past few years, the courts have rendered several decisions regarding search and seizure that have had a major impact on law enforcement particularly affecting those officers on patrol. Starting in 2016, the California legislature has further changed the scope law enforcement's ability to search electronic media devices and service provider records (including social media) under the new Electronic Communication Privacy Act, Law Enforcement needs to know the changes, get back to the basics, and adapt to these changes. This course will focus on the legal challenges law enforcement faces in the field when it comes to arrests, detentions, and searches resulting from a variety contacts. Writing search warrants will also be addressed along with recent court decisions impacting warrants, the content, and necessity for warrants in certain situations.
